

Digital Natives: Skills, Literacy and the World of Work

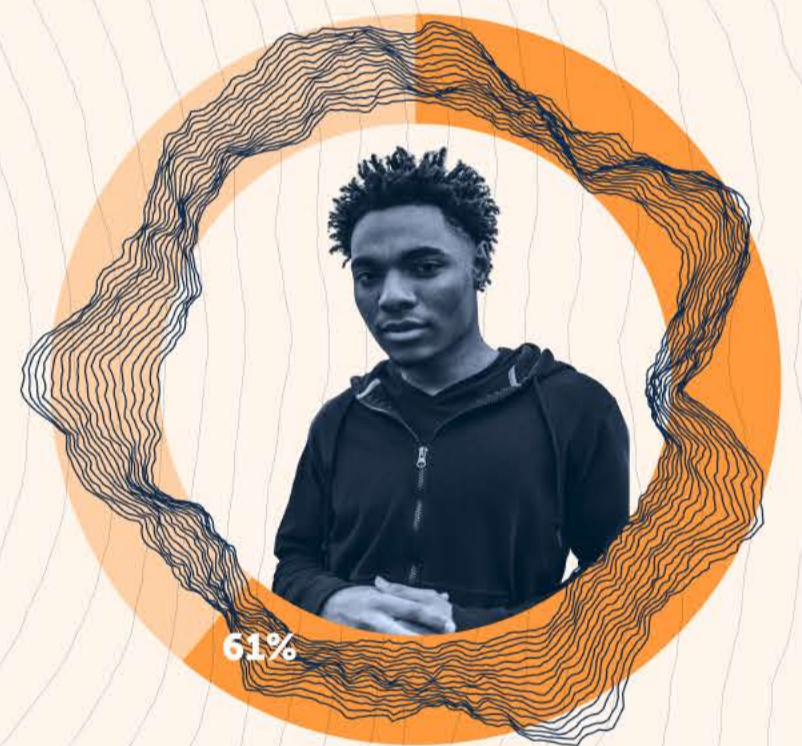

D/NATIVES in the UK, the young people currently in higher education and entering the world of work, say the ability to understand data will be vital in their futures. But how data literate do they feel and are they confident in the skills they've picked up?

Just over half of these young people see working with data as having a major role in their future careers.

Yet more than 2 in 5 don't feel that their education has given them the confidence and skills to use data.

And 3 in 5 D/NATIVES agree with the statement "Learning data skills should be more prominent in my education".

Less than half of UK D/NATIVES consider themselves to be data literate.